

Profile

IBRAHIM AHMED BANI MD DTM&H PhD FRSPH

---

Dr. Ibrahim Bani is a public health physician by training with over 20 years of experience in International Public Health. His teaching experience is extensive, including faculty appointments as an Assistant and Associate Professor (Community Health) at King Saud University Kingdom of Saudi Arabia (KSA), and as a lecturer at Jazeera Medical School Sudan, which is internationally recognized for its innovative community-based training. During his tenure at those academic institutions, he participated in many national training programs sponsored by WHO, USAID, and national governments of Saudi Arabia and Sudan and Iraq. In addition, he also worked as part-time faculty at the International Health Department at George Washington University, adjunct Associate Professor Family Medicine Department, University of Chicago at Illinois (UIC), and visiting Professor /Community Health at the American University Beirut.

Currently Dr. Bani is Associate Professor College of Medicine, Ajman University, UAE, and an Associate Professor (Adjunct) at Global Health Department, Rollins School of Public Health Emory University, Atlanta, GA, USA, Adjunct Associate Professor Chronic Disease Epidemiology Department, Yale School of Public Health, USA.

Dr. Bani's international experience is also extensive, including association with the Micronutrient Initiative (MI), World Bank, WHO, UNICEF, USAID, WFP and UN Humanitarian Mission in Iraq.